Landmark Village Sign unveiled in Alfold

It was a sunny Saturday morning when passers-by and a gathering of local residents were treated to the sight of a new and unique village sign being unveiled at Alfold Crossways. The sign, at around 12ft high, is in the form of an oak tree and mounted on a base which declares 'Alfold – Heart of Fold Country'. Parish Councillor Chris Britton, who led the project, says 'No-one will pass by on the A281 between Guildford and Horsham in future without noticing they are in Alfold, and that it has a real 'heart''. Cutting a ceremonial ribbon, Borough and County Councillor Kevin Deanus referred to landmarks in Alfold's long history, to which he felt this sign would be a fitting addition and talked about for years to come. Alfold Parish Council, which funded the project using Community Infrastructure Levy funds, worked closely with a small family firm in Leicestershire, Caltef Designs Ltd., to produce the bespoke design, which being made of 'weathering steel' will last for decades without the need for any significant maintenance.
